INTO THE WOODS

>> Located in Deer Valley, Utah, this condo is a skier's paradise. Anna Lambiotte of Studio Lambiotte designed the kitchen to reflect this. "You're on the ski mountain looking down on this valley of quintessential Utah mountains with lakes and forests—it's a beautiful vista," she says.

The interior had to complement the home's impressive exterior. Lambiotte opted for cabinetry made from reclaimed European white oak. "You're not going to find it in a lot of places; at the same time it has this very casual, organic, welcome-to-my-cabin vibe," she notes. Light countertops and black pendants harmonize with the cabinets. A rolled steel hood and hammered metal hardware add textural appeal that gives "a nod to the old mining heritage of the area."

Lambiotte wanted to give the homeowner the rustic feel he requested while also keeping the space airy: "I love that I feel like I'm in the mountains here, and I also have that sense of it being clean and light and bright." The finished product is timeless and worldly. "You could be standing in a chalet from 1950s Switzerland," she muses. >>
